

West Virginia native Donna Meredith is the author of The Glass Madonna and The Color of Lies. These novels won back-to-back first places in unpublished women's fiction from the Florida Writers Association in 2009 and 2010. The Glass Madonna, set mostly in West Virginia, examines how women's lives have changed—and not changed—over three generations in a family of glassmakers. The Color of Lies explores racial tensions and education issues in a small Southern town during Barack Obama's election. Donna is currently writing an environmental mystery and also working on a biography of renowned West Virginia cameo glass artist, Kelsey Murphy. Donna resides in Tallahassee, Florida, with her husband John. For more information, check out her website at www.donnameredith.com.
