

Communication stressed (from Page 1)

In India, America blamed Nehru for remaining neutral. "Nehru is a highly intellectual man, whom I know, and is not Communist. He understood how it was necessary to remain neutral between the great powers," stated Miss Buck.

She concludes, "In India, China, and Japan, I can say without exception the difficulties between these sides are caused by lack of communication. It isn't a barrier of language, but one of people."

This noted author has experienced many of the problems students are protesting about today. She has even experienced censorship, as her novel "The Good Earth" was censored in some areas, because of a vivid description of child birth.

Student knows writer (Continued from Page 1)

thing that was a private part of you is gone. But for someone as wonderful as Miss Buck, this should be done."

Miss Buck described the type of center she wished her home to become. "I would be happy if my birthplace could be a place where there could be understanding on the subject of east and west. Just as my parents took the best of America and West Virginia to Asia, I would like to respond by bringing the Asia I know to America and put it in West Virginia. And that's why I took such a great interest in establishing this place as a center between the east and west. If properly used and created it would be a place indeed to which Asians will come and westerners will come. This is my dream."